Lunar eclipse pictures show the moon's surface go blood red

Stargazers saw the moon in a special light this week as it went through a partial lunar eclipse and turned blood red. Monday night's eclipse left about 25 per cent of the moon's diameter covered as it passed through the Earth's shadow, and was seen across most of Europe, Asia, Australia, Africa and the Indian Ocean.

The moon appeared to turn red during the eclipse because of the sun's light is reflected in the atmosphere, in a similar way to what turns sunrises and sunsets red, according to timeanddate.com. The partial eclipse happened during the August full moon, also known as the Sturgeon Moon, was at its peak at 7:10pm on Monday night in the UK.

The name for the August full moon is believed to originate from early native American tribes who chose the title as the sturgeon fish in the North American Great Lakes are more readily caught during this month. Other tribal names for the August full moon are the Green Corn Moon and the Grain Moon. As well as the commonly known September Harvest Moon, traditional names for other full moons include the Strawberry Moon in June, Wolf Moon in January and Worm Moon in March.

No more fish and chips

A. Long before the Big Mac was invented, Britain had its own national form of fast food. "When I was a young man, it was the sort of thing you had once or twice a week," remembers 82-year old Arthur Mowbrey.

B. "Sixty years ago, you got a full size portion of cod and chips for sixpence. It was cheap, and good. "Fish 'n' chips was nourishing too. It was a proper meal, that you could eat in the street on your way home from work, or during the lunch-break. Wrapped in newspaper, it would keep warm to the last chip, even on the coldest days of the year.

C. In the last quarter of a century, things have changed. "It's not so popular with young people these days," says Lizzie, a teenager. "Most of the time, if young people want to eat out, they'll go to a Burger King or something like that, or a Chinese take-away. Fish 'n' chips is a bit old-fashioned really, I suppose. But there are still cheap chip shops around.

D. I had fish 'n' chips about three weeks ago. We sometimes have it at home, and we go and get it from the chip shop. It saves cooking!

E. "Thousands of chip shops, however, have closed in the last twenty-five years. Some have been turned into Chinese or Indian takeaways, others have just closed. They have survived best in seaside towns, where the fish is really fresh, and people visit them more as a tradition than for any other reason.
